LENTEN CONVERSATIONS SPONSORED BY THE CENTER FOR CHRISTIAN SPIRITUALITY

Let's come together over a bowl of hearty soup to continue the conversation we started last year about our visions for St. John's future.

We will meet on the Sundays of Lent between 6:00 and 7:30 pm in the Parish House beside a warm fire. Soup and bread will be provided, and Ella Regan is bringing homemade cookies.

Our first meeting is on March 1st and will give us a chance to get to know one another better by sharing something others might not know about ourselves, what brought us to St. John's, and what keeps us coming to St. John's.

After our first meeting, we might decide on a different set of topics; but for now, possible topics include:

March 8: increasing our membership; what might a diverse congregation look like?

March 15: we agree that spiritual leadership and pastoral care are the two main expectations of a rector; what do those mean to you?

March 22: what has been your spiritual journey and how has it been supported at St. John's, especially by the liturgy and the music?

March 29: what makes a sermon political rather than providing a scriptural context for understanding what goes on outside the red doors of our church? PLEASE NOTE: WE WILL MEET AT EMMAUS.

April 5: Palm Sunday: St. John's role in the community? What would you change about St. John's to make it even better?

Please SIGN-UP on the sign-up sheets in the narthex or let Ulana Klymyshyn know at klymylau@cmich.edu or 989-772-5616 (just leave a message). You can of course just come on any Sunday, but we would like to know how much soup to order. Also please indicate whether you need transportation.

Parish House Kitchen Linens

If you took the kitchen towels and dish cloths home to wash after Coffee Hour, we do appreciate that!

However...you need to remember to return them to the kitchen as soon as you can! We want to be sure that our next Hosts have fresh, clean linens when they are needed! Thank you!

remember a loved one and sign up to provide altar flowers. Flowers are a wonderful addition to worship! Thank you!

Outside the Tent

When my son Charlie was in fifth grade (I think!), I accompanied his class to see the AIDS Quilt at Finch Fieldhouse on the CMU campus. It was a deeply moving experience. Two years later I was invited to speak at the opening of a portion of the AIDS Quilt on campus, and I was inspired to write the poem that follows. I submitted it for possible inclusion in Lifting Women's Voices: Prayers To Change the World, a book of prayers and poems reflecting on the Millennial Development Goals. My poem was chosen for that book, which was published in 2009, and debuted at the General Convention that summer. It brings back many memories, many emotions. And so I share it with you.

Nancy

On Viewing the AIDS Quilt with My Son's Fifth-Grade Class

They jostle down the sidewalk, kicking dried leaves and one another's ankles, reveling in their brief escape into the pungent autumn afternoon.
At the door to the fieldhouse they form a jagged line,
then push onto the old wooden floor,
now spread from end to end with fabric squares,
fragile tributes to bodies and minds wasted away,
as by a plague.

They snake their way through the display, their steps slowing to study each square—

a lace-edged baptismal gown and a pair of tiny booties framing a baby's smiling face

a mother's appliquéd tribute to her son, who walked alone on withered legs
one hot summer day

the two blocks to the funeral home to arrange his final rites

a rainbow at the center of a collage, snapshots and mementos of a lifetime of hopes crowded into thirty-seven years—

all underscored, as on a tombstone, by the years of birth and death.

The line grows quiet,
the students drawn into a sadness too deep to express.
For a breathless hour they weave along,
sometimes bending to touch an image,
noting with solemn eyes the symbols,
the names, the dates,
until they emerge again into the autumn sunlight,
walking quickly, feet scuffing the dry leaves,
down the street leading back to the dull safety of their young lives.

DCDI – Diocesan Church Development Institute – is a leadership program of The Episcopal Church sponsored by the Dioceses of Eastern and Western Michigan which aims to develop leaders, strengthen congregations, and transform the world.

Its purpose is to help participants develop the skills and tools to become leaders who can help their parishes adapt and grow for service to their communities in an ever-changing world. Members of St. John's (Ulana Klymyshyn, Nancy Herman Kinney, Sandy Wood, and Sr. Diane Stier) have been participating since last May's Invite, Welcome, Connect gathering. All the gatherings are held at St. John's, Midland – nearly at our back door! Beginning on February 29, Ella Jo Regan has graciously agreed to take Sandy Wood's place on the St. John's team. "Thank you!" to Sandy for her service – and to all for their willingness to be a part of this program that will continue through all of next year as well.

St. John's Vestry Minutes February 9, 2020

Present: Adam Baker(clerk), D.J. Proctor, Marcia David, Nancy Herman-Kinney, Ulana Klymyshyn, Ella Jo Regan, David Shirley, Diane Stier (guest), Tom Cochrane, Harriett White, Eric Vinciguerra

Diane opened with a prayer. David thanked the Vestry for their cooperation and guidance during the Annual Meeting.

Eric moved that Vestry approve both sets of minutes, Harriet seconded. Vestry approved. David explained the Office of Transition Ministry (OTM) form sent from the Bishop's Office.

Ella moved that Vestry approve the amended Rector Profile, Parish Profile, and Community Profile. Tom seconded. Vestry approved.

David reported on the acoustic work in the Parish House and the need to revoice the piano.

Ulana reported on her work on planning a Lenten series of "cottage meetings" of 10-12 people each to discuss our vision for the future of St. John's.

Nancy completed her Buildings and Grounds report. She has contacted a company to replace the aluminum pole on the state historical marker for a cost of $390. Tom moved that Vestry replace the aluminum pole on the historical marker. Ulana seconded. Vestry approved. Nancy also reported that she is looking for a mason to fix the piece of concrete missing from the front steps, and she had a few names in mind. No real work can be started on it until spring.

Marcia mentioned that she had been approached by 8 o'clock parishioners about the sounds of choir warming up disrupting the service. Diane observed that she was not giving the sermon by the time the choir started warming up. Vestry suggested parishioners as well as choir be reminded that 8:45 a.m. is the start time for warm-up.

Ella reported that she would have names for the Easter baskets soon.

David reported some highlights from Clancy's Financial Report. We are at 8.33% of the budget so far for this year.

Diane reported that there will be a diocesan Leadership Day regional meeting in Lansing this year, and that it is a good chance to see what is going on outside of our parish.

David reported that he would like St. John's to host a 'Protecting God's Children' and 'Protecting God's People' training session in late spring. He will contact the Bishop's office.

Eric moved Vestry adjourn, Nancy seconded. Vestry adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,
Adam Baker, Clerk

ANGLICAN WORTHIES

354. Patteson, John Coleridge (1827-1871)
Bishop of Melasia

Unlike many Worthies, Patteson was not born into an ecclesiastical family but was the son of a judge in Devonshire. He was raised by his mother's family before matriculating to Eton. His biographer, W.H. Fremantle, says that Patteson "was an undistinguished scholar, but he was captain of the cricket eleven and showed much strength of character." Then Balliol, by that time the most intellectually prominent college at Oxford. Again, he was unremarkable in his studies, but made the acquaintance of Benjamin *Jowett, the controversial academic who edited Essays and Reviews (1855) and translated Plato, as well as other Fellows who became lifelong friends.

After his degree in 1849 Patteson traveled in Switzerland and Italy. He picked up German in Dresden and began to study Hebrew and Arabic, the traditional "oriental" languages; he seemed adept at languages. He returned to England in 1852 and became a Fellow (an unmarried scholar, entitled to live in college), not at Balliol, but at Merton; the following year he was ordained curate at Alfington, near where he grew up.

Patteson's career changed dramatically when George Augustus Selwyn (1809-1878), Bishop of New Zealand, visited the parish. He was looking for mission help; Patteson had become well known. Patteson was immediately drawn to this remote opportunity, becoming Selwyn's missionary chaplain. This reminds one of that missionary hymn, "I, the Lord of sea and sky," in the refrain of which, the Lord asks, "Whom shall I send?" and the response is, "Here I am, Lord, Is it I, Lord? I will go, Lord, if you lead me."

Patteson was to work in the island cluster of Melanesia, lying east of Australia, where in 1849 Selwyn had begun a scheme to take young boys, with their parents' consent, to a mission school in the New Zealand for a year. These islands were what in World War II we called the Solomons. The natives could be found in New Caledonia and eastern New Guinea. In her book, Sea People (2019), Christina Thompson explains that the islands of Melanesia are not Polynesians, such as are found in Tonga, and such distant places as the Maori of New Zealand, Hawaii, and even Easter Island. The Polynesians are sailors, the Melanesians not.

Patteson, working from New Zealand, assisted in Selwyn's venture. For a while he lived on some of the islands. At the school he taught "the rudiments of Western Knowledge and the Christian religion," which, it was hoped, they would share with their families back home. Fremantle says, "Patteson refused to regard the Melanesians as an inferior race. His pupils appreciated his attitude, and his remarkable linguistic powers greatly aided him." There were many languages among the islands. Patteson chose one to master, and it was used in the school.

In 1861 Patteson was consecrated Bishop of Melanesian Islands. At first the mission school flourished, and in two years he was assisted by others. As newly ordained clergy are apt to do, Fremantle says, Patteson “worked incessantly from dawn until night, teaching, organizing, and conducting divine worship.” He decided God’s work was too urgent and demanding to marry. Good with languages, he learned a bit of twenty of the island languages, translating parts of scripture into the Mota tongue. Of Melanesian languages generally, he wrote:

[It is] very poor in respect of words belonging to civilized and literary and religious life, but exceedingly rich in all that pertains to the needs and habits of men circumstanced as they are. . . . [Therefore] don’t devise modes of expression unknown to the language at present in use. They can’t understand, and therefore don’t use words to express definitions.

It should be noted that throughout his brief ministry he made few converts to Christianity, but he believed his educational efforts could improve their way of living—and by this it seems to me that he meant the moral and ethical. In other words, he did not believe the role of mission was to “denominalize” the natives but change their island heritage as little as possible. In 1868 he ordained his first Melanesian clergyman.

But the fate of the island mission was threatened by European traders who needed labor in the sugar plantations of Fiji and the Australian mainland. Melanesian natives were willing to go to these locations a few years for the pay. This absenteeism threatened to undermine the educational component of Patteson’s ministry. Fremantle says that Patteson wisely refrained from criticizing this trade, but he felt it needed regulation by the Crown.

On occasion Patteson’s life was in danger, as some of the natives were not entirely sympathetic with his work. On September of 1871 he visited the island of Nukayu in the Santa Cruz group. He was familiar with the area, having been there several times, so he believed he was safe. However he and his mission colleagues ashore were stunned by “a flight of arrows” and mortally wounded. Signs on their bodies indicated that they had been attacked by natives in retaliation for the abduction of five natives by European planters for a sugar plantation, a plot they had nothing to do with. The bishop was buried at sea.

Members of the mission urged that there be no retaliation, but later in the year a British naval officer came to Nukapu to investigate the incident and was received with hostility. He ordered a bombardment of the island. Back home the government rushed through Parliament the Pacific Islanders Protection Act to regulate the use of island labor. Patteson was memorialized by his college, and a memorial cross was erected at Nukapu in 1884.

In 1872 the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel requested a day to memorialize Patteson’s martyrdom, and Lesser Feasts and Fasts designates September 22 as Patteson’s day of honor and remembrance.
